WAR PICTURES FROM THE SOUTH.
BY B. ESTVAN.

COLONEL OF CAVALRY IN THE CONFEDERATE STATES.
1 vol. 12mo. Cloth, $1 25.

I have as a refuge, for the second time set my foot upon the rocky shores of Old England, to complete, under the shelter of her glorious banner, a narrative of the remarkable events that occurred during a period of more than eighteen months' campaigning in America, the knowledge of which I acquired from my personal experience as an officer of the Confederate army.

Now that my book is ready I can confidently place it before the reader, with the assurance that these "War Pictures" have been delineated not only to the best of my ability, but with a conscientious regard to truth.

Although circumstances led me to take service in the Confederate army—my long residence in the Southern States being, however, the main inducement thereto—I have not been less disposed to do justice to both sides engaged in this honorable contest. Thus, while ever ready to bestow my hearty admiration on all the instances that came to my knowledge of heroism, patriotic devotion, and high principled conduct, whether displayed on the part of my own compatriots or on that of their opponents, I have, on the other hand, not hesitated to lay bare the errors and blamable acts, by whomsoever committed, that have been conducive to so much disaster and misery, nor have I spared the wrong-doers.

Having completed my task, my thoughts naturally recur to the land where this unhappy war is raging. To America, my second home, whose image clings to with fond attachment, I cannot look back without sorrow for her misfortunes. I there contemplate deplored the spectacle of a people once united, now dissolved through mutual dissensions which, involving in their fatal course the principle of the defense and maintenance of sacred rights, have issued in a suicidal conflict. My memory, in reverting to the scenes so recently witnessed, painfully recalls those sanguinary battle-fields wherein many a gallant soldier breathed out his spirit, struck to death by the bullet of a man whom he had meant to regard in the light of a brother. Again the grand specter of discord rises before me, with lightning flashing from its eyes, and rancor fuming at its lips, as armed with a scourge of serpents, it frantically urges on whole populations to mutual destruction!

"Now that my book is ready, I dedicate it to the soldiers of the two contending armies, as a greeting from afar. I have only to add that if some of my criticisms may appear too severe to those whose conduct I censure, I have, in making them, been actuated solely by a fearless resolve to tell the truth and state my honest convictions. In the exercise of this, which I claim to be an undoubted right, I have written my book!"—Preface.
